

A group photo full of smiles and thank you to all those who sent gifts. The children were truly overwhelmed by the stuffed toys, little toy trucks, flashlights, and many other items. When you've never had a stuffed toy before, that moment is unforgettable.

After leaving Linh Son Children's Homes I was in Kathmandu briefly. It was there that we purchased books in Nepali for the library. A man in Whitehorse donated money for Nepali books, while the library construction was funded by Mayo people in particular the children in the Kids helping Kids club.

Older children leaving for school. They will take the bus - just regular public transport, not a school bus. This is the standard uniform for older children.

Here we are purchasing supplies. These photos show the store where I bought blankets for the children, the truck we used for hauling and the builder's supply.
